DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Aluminum siding covers the clapboard finish of the frame house. Almost square, two stories high. It faces west, three bays by one double window. A one-story porch faces the west, or street side. The A roof ridge line runs north-south. A chimney for stoves rises in the center of the house, and a new flue has been added outside on the south side of the house for a new furnace. The foundation walls are carefully-cut slate blocks.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

Typical of almost a dozen houses in Cardiff, this house is plain, comfortable, well balanced in plan for simple unpretentious living.

The Welsh ancestry, whose special skills contributed much good building material to the farm buildings of Harford County, is not in evidence today.
